INDIA METEOROLOGICAL DEPARTMENT

Memorandum on the probable amount of rain and snow in Northwest India in January, February and March 1957

It is possible in some years to form a rough estimate of the probable amount of Winter Precipitation in Northwest India during January to March from certain antecedent atmospheric conditions in different parts of the globe. The factors which act as guides in this matter are, in the order of decreasing reliability, the following:—

- (1) The westerly component of the upper winds over northern India at a height of 5 to 8 Kms. (September second half and October first half),
- (2) December rain at Port Blair,
- (3) Mean pressure in December in South America,
- (4) December rain in western region.

2. Division 'North-west India'

In this memorandum 'North-west India' is taken to consist of the Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I) (including PEPSU and Delhi), Rajasthan, Gujarat, Saurashtra and Cutch. In as much, however, as the rainfall in March in the Uttar Pradesh is said to be prejudicial rather than favourable to the crops, this rainfall is not taken into consideration

3. Data

The relevant data for the present reason are:—

- (1) The high level winds over Northern India—the westerly component of the upper winds was weaker than usual over New Delhi and Gwalior,
- (2) December rainfall at Port Blair was in large defect,
- (3) South American pressure—Pressure was 0.6 mm. above normal in December,
- (4) The Western rain was in large defect in December.

4. Conclusion

Out of the four factors which are used in forecasting Winter Precipitation in North-west India, this year South American pressure and Port Blair rain are favourable and the remaining two factors are very unfavourable. The combined rainfall and snowfall in North-west India during the period January to March 1957 is likely to be normal or in slight defect.
